Blake Shelton and Gwen Stefani are pros at mixing business with pleasure. In fact, the cute couple of one year recently wrapped up Season 12 of "The Voice," where they competed against each other as coaches.

Now, it looks like the lovebirds might be working on a new project, as a team.

The two were spotted heading into a Los Angeles-based recording studio on June 1, according to "Entertainment Tonight." Their destination has fans wondering if they're working on a song together – or perhaps, an entire album!

The Instagram shot above shows Gwen casually clad in an army jacket and a pair of blue jeans. Blake, who walks alongside her, looks comfortable in a black button-down shirt and his signature Smithworks Vodka ball cap.

Even though she's a rock star and he's a country singer, seeing them collaborate musically is not all that surprising. In 2016, they released a heartfelt duet called "Go Ahead and Break My Heart," as part of Blake's "If I'm Honest" album.

They both have also expressed interest in writing and recording together again. "Man, I hope so," Blake admitted to ET, earlier this year. Then, back in March, Gwen told the outlet that she was working on some new music in the studio. However, she didn't give away any details.

So, would you be excited to hear new music from Gwen and Blake? We'd love to hear your thoughts.

BLAKE SHELTON AND GWEN STEFANI MAY BE RECORDING TOGETHER

Flakes 8:41pm Tuesday June 3rd 2017

How would you feel if Blake and Gwen became "Sheltoni" for real, like professional? Because it may be happening... On Thursday, Blake Shelton and Gwen Stefani were caught on camera heading into an LA recording studio together. The two were dressed casually, with both sporting jeans and holding their phones in their hands as they made their way into the Hollywood facility. The Hollywood/Nashville power couple previously collaborated on the 2010 single "Go Ahead and Break My Heart," which appeared on Shelton's now recent album "I'm a Horse."
